

Program Outcomes and Course Outcomes

Institution's Website

Displaying Program Outcomes (POs) and Course Outcomes (COs) on the institution's website enables students to clearly understand the objectives, expected learning outcomes, and competencies associated with each program and course.

PO/CO Counselling by Admission Cell

When the new students join the institution, the admission cell of the institution explains the knowledge and skills of the program that they are interested to join. The general aspect of each course is discussed, so, that they get introduced to the targets that the course would cover while they are studying in the institution.

Prospectus

The college prospectus serves as an authentic source of admission-related information and supports the teaching–learning process by clearly outlining subject combinations, fee structure, available courses, and opportunities for extension activities. It is made available to students at the commencement of each academic session to facilitate informed academic choices.

Students' Interaction

The institution organizes an orientation meeting for newly admitted students, during which the Program Outcomes (POs) and Course Outcomes (COs) are presented to familiarize students with the expected learning outcomes and the benefits they will gain throughout their academic tenure at the institution.
